

Partner and child visas – planning levels and capping.

The Government implements a variety of mechanisms to control the flow of visa applications under the Migration Programme. This includes the 'cap and queue', 'cap and cease', and priority processing measures under the Migration Act 1958 (the Act).

The Minister has the power to limit the number of visas in particular visa subclasses and classes in a programme under section 85 of the Act. This is administered by a legislative instrument. Section 86 provides that once the limit (cap) is reached no further applications can be granted in that programme year. Although a visa can no longer be granted until the start of the new programme year, processing of applications continues and applicants who meet the requirements then wait in a queue for visa grant consideration in a following year, subject to places becoming available. In family visa programs that are subject to capping, such as Parent and Other Family programmes, applicants can be allocated a queue date if the application is found to meet the initial criteria for the grant of the visa.

Section 87 of the Migration Act (1958) prevents 'capping' of visas to Partner and Child visas.

Each year the Government announce Migration Programme planning levels as part of the Budget. Planning levels are not a 'cap'. They are indicative and subject to review throughout the programme year to reflect changes in economic conditions and the demand for places.

There is scope for decision makers to take planning levels into account when considering visa applications. A decision maker can still grant a visa to a person who applied for it on the ground that he or she was the spouse, de facto partner or dependent child of an Australian Citizen or permanent resident, even if planning levels for the relevant visa category would be exceeded.

Child visas are no longer part of the managed Migration Programme. From 2019-20 Child visas will be fully demand driven and not receive a planning level. Orphan relative visas are now part of the Other Family category for planning purposes only. They continue to be exempt from capping.

Partner and child visas – planning levels and capping.

The Government implements a variety of mechanisms to control the flow of visa applications under the Migration Programme. This includes the 'cap and queue', 'cap and cease', and priority processing measures under the Migration Act 1958 (the Act).

Section 85 provides the Minister with the power to limit (cap) the number of visas in particular visa subclasses and classes in a programme. This is given effect through a legislative instrument signed by the Minister. Section 86 provides that once the limit (cap) is reached no further applications can be granted in that programme year. Although a visa can no longer be granted until the start of the next programme year, processing of applications continues and applicants who meet the requirements are allocated a place in the queue for visa grant consideration in a subsequent year, subject to places becoming available. In family visa programs that are subject to capping, such as the Parent and Other Family categories, applicants can be allocated a queue date if the application is found to meet the initial criteria for the grant of the visa.

Section 87 of the Migration Act (1958) prevents 'capping' of visas to Partner and Child visas.

Each year the Government announces Migration Programme planning levels as part of the Budget. Planning levels are not a 'cap'. They are indicative and subject to review throughout the programme year to reflect changes in economic conditions and the demand for places.

There is scope for decision makers to take planning levels into account when considering visa applications. A decision maker can still grant a visa to a person who applied for it on the ground that he or she was the spouse, de facto partner or dependent child of an Australian citizen or permanent resident, even if planning levels for the relevant visa category would be exceeded.

Child visas (excluding Orphan Relative visas, which are reported against the Other Family category) are no longer part of the managed Migration Programme. From 2019-20 Child visas will be fully demand-driven and not subject to a planning level.

5. Can details be provided as to estimated aggregate costs and ASL allocated to Partner visa processing in each year since 2010, including on a unit cost and ASL application finalised basis, and can details be provided as to revenue collected from Partner visa applications in each year since 2010.

Partner visa processing is undertaken both within Australia and at offshore posts. Offshore posts are responsible for processing a number of visa types including between 30 per cent to 40 per cent of all Partner visas. In offshore posts there is no demarcation or attribution of costs or staff to particular visa types. Resources are flexibly allocated to manage demand and onhand levels for all visa types processed.

The Department is not able to provide definitive overall costs or average staff levels undertaking Partner visa processing.

The Visa Application Charge (VAC) revenue collected is not available within the Department's financial system at the individual subclass level.

6. Can details be provided as to the average length of time between lodgement of Partner visa applications by sub-category and the allocation of the application to a processing officer for each year since 2010.

This information is not available.

7. Given a Migration Program ceiling of 160,000 visas per annum, can details be provided as to planning levels for each sub-category of Partner visas in 2019-20, and the three subsequent program years.

The 2019-20 Migration Program is set at a ceiling of 160,000 places. The size and composition of the permanent Migration Program is reviewed and set by the Government on an annual basis. The planning level for the Partner category is set at 39,799 places for 2019-20, and is not further broken down.

8. Can details be provided as to the forecast for Partner visa applications for 2019-20, and the three subsequent program years.

This information is not available.

9. Can details be provided as to the forecast size of the backlog at the end of 2019-20, and each subsequent program year; do these forecasts take into account the number of Australians and their partners who decide not to apply for a Partner visa due to the lengthening processing times and backlogs, and does the Government consider the decline in Partner application rates to reflect such discouragement and, ultimately, the decision of Australians and their Partners to choose to live outside of Australia; and does the Government consider this to be a positive outcome for Australia.

This information is not available.

10. Given the growing backlog of Partner visas, can details be provided as to the approach to be taken to limiting Partner visas granted in 2019-20.

The Department manages Migration Program streams in line with the planning levels and priorities set by Government.

11. Has the Government sought advice on the legal acceptability of this approach to restricting the grant of Partner visas, particularly spouse visas; if so, can a copy be provided of such advice.

Due to legal professional privilege we cannot answer this question.
