Key Issues

1. On 28 May 2024 during Budget Senate Estimates, Senator Shoebridge asked the following questions regarding individuals transferred to Nauru since September 2023, who expressed interest in voluntarily returning to their country of origin and engaged with the assisted voluntary return (AVR) program. This public interest immunity claim will be used to address all of the following questions, due to their similarity:
 - a. 'What were the payments made, and to which countries where the people returned?' and 'Has anyone been returned to Afghanistan?' (SQ24-001112)
 - b. 'Of this cohort [people returned to their country of origin]: What are their countries of origin?' (SQ24-001658)
 - c. 'Provide the following details regarding people seeking asylum who were transferred to Nauru since September 2023: There have been reports in the media (ABC article 20 May) that Chinese nationals currently detained on Nauru have been offered resettlement packages valuing $US5,100 (about $7,600) per person and a return ticket if they agreed to go back to China. Was this offered to any men who have expressed their intent to seek asylum in Australia? (SQ24-001673)
2. There is a basis to make a public interest immunity (PII) claim on the ground that the disclosure may reasonably be expected to damage Australia's international relations.

s. 33(a)(iii)

3. There is also a basis to make a PII claim on the ground that the disclosure would, or might reasonably be expected to, damage Australia's national security. s. 33(a)(i)

[Redacted]

4. A letter to the Chair of the Committee has been prepared for your signature (Attachment B) outlining the Government's PII claim.

Background

5. An AVR is considered a durable migration option as mandated by the United Nations High Commission for Refugees. AVRs are challenging to implement and can include sensitive diplomatic negotiations with relevant return countries.

Assisted voluntary return - countries of origin and return countries

6. The AVR information requested includes identifying the countries of origin and citizenship for transferees, whether they are returned to their country of origin, and what countries transferees have been returned to. s. 33(a)(i), s. 33(a)(iii)

10.

Con

11. The Secretary, Associate Secretary Immigration and the ABF Commissioner were not consulted on this submission.

12. The Legal Group was consulted on this PII claim.

Risks and Sensitivities

s. 33(a)(i), s. 33(a)(ii)

14. If the Senate committee concludes that the statement does not sufficiently justify the withholding of the information, the Senate committee may report the matter to the Senate for further consideration.
