Subject: Multi-year migration planning principles and National Cabinet decisions

Purpose

- 2) Department of Home Affairs officials are available to provide further information as required.
- 3) A timeline of engagement with the state and territory governments and National Cabinet decisions is at Attachment A.

Key Issues

- 4) As outlined in MS24-001076 the transition to multi-year migration planning model was agreed at National Cabinet in August 2023, announced in the Migration Strategy in December 2023 and agreed in the 2024-25 Budget in May 2024.
- 5) While planning Australia’s Migration Program is a Commonwealth responsibility, state and territory governments hold many of the key levers that support positive migration outcomes.
- 6) On 28 April 2023, National Cabinet agreed that the Commonwealth would commit to a greater role for states and territories to contribute to Australia’s migration settings as part of the development of the new national Migration Strategy.
- 7) In June 2023, the Associate Secretary for Immigration wrote to state and territory counterparts to circulate a Migration Strategy – Discussion Paper: a nation building endeavour with States and Territories. The discussion paper included six principles that would serve as a guide to migration planning.

s. 47C(1)

- 8) Following the National Cabinet decision in August 2023, a cross-jurisdictional working group was established and refined a set of guiding principles to develop the multi-year migration planning model.
- 9) On 19 December 2023, the inaugural Ministerial Migration Roundtable endorsed the following principles:
 - a) Working together: The Commonwealth, States, and Territories work together to identify Australia’s migration needs and priorities and to deliver a seamless migration experience.
 - b) Positive contribution: Migration programs optimise a positive contribution to Australia’s social cohesion and economy and ensure skilled migration programs fill demonstrable skill gaps that are unable to be met domestically.
 - c) Regional focus: Migration programs must help to ensure that regional Australia benefits from comprehensive migration and population planning.
 - d) Aligned investments: Migration programs are aligned with investments in infrastructure, service provision and housing.

- e) Population planning alignment: Migration planning is aligned with Commonwealth, State, and Territory population planning.
 - f) Transparency: Greater collaboration across governments around data-sharing, skills shortage evaluation tools and other capabilities supports transparent and evidence-based decision-making.
 - g) Flexibility: Migration planning has flexibility to respond to domestic and global economic fluctuations, geopolitical events and program management considerations.
- 10) The Department of Home Affairs has worked closely with jurisdictions over the last 12 months to co-design and implement the migration planning model for 2025–26.
- a) States and territories strongly support a move to multi-year migration planning and have invested in its development.

Timeline - state and territory engagement and National Cabinet decisions

Date	Engagement Activity
April 2023	National Cabinet agreed to a greater role for states and territories to contribute to Australia's migration settings as part of the development of the new national Migration Strategy.
June 2023	Associate Secretary for Immigration wrote to state and territory counterparts to circulate a Migration Strategy – Discussion Paper: a nation building endeavour with States and Territories . The discussion paper included principles that would serve as a guide to migration planning.
August 2023	National Cabinet agreed to develop a principles-based, multi-year planning model for migration, to improve collaboration with states and territories on migration settings.
October 2023	The Department of Home Affairs stood-up a cross-jurisdictional working group to improve collaboration with states and territories on migration settings. The working group included three representatives from each state and territory, and observers from the Department of the Treasury; Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet; and Jobs and Skills Australia. The working group refined the set of guiding principles outlined in the Associate Secretary Immigration's June correspondence, and collaborated to develop elements of the multi-year migration planning model.
December 2023	The inaugural Ministerial Migration Roundtable (MMR) endorsed key principles to guide the development of the multi-year planning model and supported a model that would provide greater certainty and transparency around state and territory nomination allocations. The former Minister for Immigration convened the MMR to advance cooperation on Australia's migration planning and reaffirm commitments made in the Migration Strategy .
May 2024	The Government announced that it will extend the planning horizon for the permanent Migration Program from one to four years, from 2025–26.
June 2024	The cross-jurisdictional working group was disbanded following agreement to the planning model. Discussions with working group members are continuing through the revitalised Skilled Migration Officials Group (SMOG), and regular policy and delivery bilateral meetings.
June 2024	The MMR convened to discuss the Australian Government's commitment to transition to a multi-year migration planning model over a four-year horizon and the role of State and Territory Migration Plans ('the Plans') in effective national migration planning.

Subject: Rationale and implementation details for multi-year migration planning

Purpose

On 11 November 2024, your office verbally requested further information on the policy rationale and implementation details of the multi-year migration planning model as well as state and territory views and positions on the model.

Policy rationale

important role in meeting our national challenges and in supporting regional Australia. However, the Review and consultation with states and territories highlighted that our policy and program settings are not strategically targeting or supporting migrants with the skills we need to meet current and emerging national challenges.

- The report identified that two key settings could be adjusted to address these challenges, including:
 - a) the short term outlook of our annual permanent Migration Program planning; and
 - b) the limited role of states and territories to determine their own migration needs, especially in regional Australia.

National Cabinet and state/territory input and views

- At National Cabinet meeting of 28 April, 2023, First Ministers agreed that the Commonwealth will commit to a greater role for states and territories to contribute to Australia's migration settings as part of the development of the new national Migration Strategy (Attachment A - National Cabinet, Record of Meeting, Brisbane CPO, 28 April 2023, Item 5).

- To deliver on this commitment, the Government identified that extending the planning horizon of the permanent Migration Program could help to plan in our national interest and provide a greater role for states and territories. Consultation with states and territories indicated broad support for an extended timeline and closer consultation on migration planning (MS23-001341 Attachment G refers).
- s. 34(2)
- On 16 August 2023, First Ministers agreed to better coordinate Australia's migration settings including by developing a principles-based, multi-year planning model for migration, to improve collaboration with states and territories on migration settings (Attachment B - National Cabinet, Record of Meeting, Brisbane CPO, 16 August 2023, Item 4).
- At this meeting, First Ministers also agreed to improve migration planning through:
 - a) Uplifting engagement for better collaboration across the Federation including launching an Annual Ministerial Migration Roundtable as a touchpoint to review multi-year planning, and sharpen the focus of existing migration fora.
 - b) Improve two-way data sharing to support migration planning including identifying data gaps and harnessing efforts already underway across and between governments.

Migration Strategy and multi-year model development

- The Migration Strategy set out a key action to improve migration planning to get the right skills in the right places and to closely collaborate with states and territories to improve migration planning. This action includes extending the planning horizon of the permanent Migration Program beyond its current 12 months to enable a better planning effort to meet national strategic, structural and long-term challenges.
- Following the commitment at National Cabinet, the commonwealth and states and territories collaborated on the development of a principles-based multi-year migration planning model through the establishment of a cross jurisdictional working group. The working group developed a model that was also discussed at a cross jurisdictional interdepartmental committee.
