I, Austin Mackell of [REDACTED], an Australian citizen and registered voter strongly oppose the Telecommunications and Other Legislation (Assistance and Access) Bill 2018. I oppose it for the same reason many others oppose it, and am certain the vast majority of submissions you are receiving share my sentiments.

The law undermines important values of personal privacy and the division of powers, allowing a political appointee to make decisions that should have to go through, and be challengeable within the judiciary.

Regards,

Austin.
