

From: Helen L Malin
To: Assistance Bill Consultation
Subject: No !!!
Date: Saturday, 8 September 2018 11:33:19 AM

By passing this bill you are giving the government free access to everything. Where is the privacy. Currently you must prove there is a risk and get permission to access their information to prove or disprove the threat. There are rules already in place that try and keep the government in check.

With these new laws all the government just says "I want to see if this person is not paying child support or defrauding Centrelink" and get instant access. Even if the person is innocent the government can do checks. This draft should be solely on the safety of Australia and large corporations.

The only time the government should have access is if there is a credible threat or have trigger words like Bomb, terrorist, killing, Jihad etc etc.

You are taking away the privacy rights of the public, what's to say I'm having a conversation with my mother and mention I'll kill my sister, the next thing I know this is brought up in court if something happened to her. When in actual fact I was meaning I'll kill her if she does it again, as in leaving a mess in the kitchen. You could go through my conversations and use this against me.

Why don't you do something constructive like take DNA of every baby born so in future if things happen you have the person on record. At least if you don't do wrong the DNA on record means nothing.

Regards Helen Malin