Subject: Proposal for Exception in Visa Medical and Special Education Requirements for Long-Term Temporary Residents Seeking Permanent Residency with Children Facing Disabilities

Department of Immigration of Australia,

I trust this message finds you well. I am writing to propose a modification to the migration policy, specifically concerning long-term temporary residents residing in Australia for over 10 years. The suggestion is to grant exceptions from the standard visa medical and special education requirements for those with children experiencing disabilities or intellectual disability particularly for temporary visas leading to permanent residency and permanent resident visa as they are parents of the children who born in Australia, So they should be counted as a part of Australia and treat as their own country kids like other western countries do it for an example Canada.

Acknowledging the substantial contribution and commitment of these individuals to Australia over the past decade, it is recommended that compassionate considerations be extended to ease the challenges faced by families dealing with disabilities.

Implementing such exceptions aligns with the principles of inclusivity and social responsibility, reflecting positively on Australia's commitment to fostering diverse and supportive communities.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,
