To whom it may concern

Just one basic question:

Why in all of the deliberation of this consultation paper was the important and every increasing relevance of electronic security not considered, mentioned and/or discussed? ART supplies T1 monitoring services to many critical infrastructure and Government sites and it always appears that electronic security including monitoring/access control/surveillance/crowd control/etc is always secondary to the emphasis and importance put on manpower at these sites. Even in the list of interested parties you are asking responses from security is not mentioned.

It would be advantageous to have input in an appropriate section for security companies, organisations and Associations, such as ASIAL, to have specific input into security provisions and in that section to delineate the advantages that electronic security can provide.

Cheers Louise Christie
